COLLEGE NOTES

Staff and students have rolled up their sleeves and pitched in to make Hunter's effort in the National Defense a noteworthy one. When they are not getting first-aid training, selling defense stamps, or helping to entertain members of the armed forces, they are knitting socks, helmets, and sweaters in elevators, lunchrooms, and lounges.

President Shuster has appointed a Faculty National Defense Committee which has been working out with the Student National Defense Committee a three-part program for defense of the college building, academic aspects of defense, and community contact.

Student Emergency Squads will be formed in every class to assist in the care of physically handicapped students and to perform other duties during air-raids. Staff members have been assigned to air-raid warden posts, first-aid stations, and other patrol duties. Drills have already been held at both branches of the College.

The Park Avenue Building in case of an air attack will be used as a shelter by children from the Hunter Elementary School, the Lexington School for the Deaf, the New York Foundling Hospital, and P. S. 76. As one of the safest buildings in the city it has been placed on a 24-hour-day, 7-day-week schedule in its service to the community as a bomb shelter.

Detailed plans for the protection of the building have been made by Mr. John J. Fleischmann, chief custodial engineer and community air-raid warden. A helmeted, fire-fighting brigade of seven observers are constantly on the roof, prepared to combat fire caused by incendiary bombs. Pails containing sand and ashes have been placed on every floor of the bombshelter area.

To take the place of the elevator operators who will have charge of maintenance of water supply and repair of heating units as well as fire-fighting, are student volunteers. Seventy-five were asked to volunteer, but 165 responded to the request.

The academic values work of the committee will consist of introducing into the College defense courses and such other courses as would lead to a greater enlightenment in regard to the general war situation. Students and staff have signed up for a first-aid course planned for the Christmas vacation period. Red Cross courses in nurses' aid, first-aid, air-raid precautions, motor mechanics, radio coding, mobile canteen work, quantity cookery, and sewing will be given next semester, and, in addition, orientation courses dealing with basic and historical knowledge of war problems. Knitting classes have been formed by the Student Defense Committee, and wool for 700 sweaters has been distributed to experienced knitters.

The community contact plans include a city-wide student conference as well as dances for service men and organized recreational activities. Seventy-five service men have been invited through the New York Recreational Center to be the guests of an equal number of Hunter students at a Christmas dinner on December 23, and dances have been held by the Student Council for members of the various branches of the armed forces.

Students in the Evening Session are also engaged in fund-raising projects, expanded campaigns of tinfoil and aluminum collections. They are also collecting books and magazines to be sent to the camps and are organizing a "Give a Gift to a Soldier" drive. Red Cross courses are being planned, and air-raid warden volunteers are being placed at the disposal of the neighborhood police. Knitting rounds out the extensive program.

Members of the Evening Session Staff are volunteering for assignments similar to those of the Day Session.

"The responses of Hunter girls to the demand for participation in the country's defense efforts have been complete and unstinted," President Shuster declared. "Virtually all the leisure time of the girls will be used to do their part in serving their country."

FRANCES SANFORD MEMORIAL

The friends of the late Frances Sanford will be glad to know that the Fund raised in her memory has recently been put to use. The interest on the money contributed shortly after Miss Sanford's death was used for a time to purchase pictures for the use of teachers and pupils of the Model School. On account of the unsettled location of the school, especially after the fire, the interest was later allowed to accumulate until the account reached over nine hundred dollars.

When the school, now known as the Hunter College Elementary School, finally was assigned to quarters especially prepared for its work in the New Building, the trustees of the fund found that the most urgent need for its educational advancement was visual aid material. So, carrying out the stated purpose of the fund "to expend the principal for the purchase of something of educational or artistic value", a splendid start has been made.

A fine 16-millimeter projector, with sound track, screen, and a cabinet that is also an adjustable table for setting up the machine, was the first important item. As these projectors are now difficult to obtain and advancing in price, we were very fortunate in securing this particularly fine Bell and Howell machine. After the purchase of other equipment such as a Cine kodak for use in recording school activities, necessary reflector, meter, filters, bulbs, and rolls, a substantial balance remains for rental or purchase of reels that will make lessons as realistic as proponents of visual education believe they should be.

How Miss Sanford would have appreciated such aids in her teaching days!
