INTRODUCTION

The records of Lenox Hill Neighborhood House were surveyed by archivists from the LaGuardia and Wagner Archives New York City Settlement House Records Survey Project in August of 1994. The survey originally identified approximately fifty linear feet of significant historical records and recommended that they be donated to Archives & Special Collections of the Hunter College Libraries. Lenox Hill Neighborhood House board of directors accepted this recommendation and donated the records to Hunter College Archives on October 21, 1994. Archives & Special Collections has designated this collection #95-06.

At the time of the donation, the bulk of the records were grouped in series that served as the basis for the arrangement of the collection. However, several feet of material frequently referred to by the settlement's development department had been separated out from the rest of the records. This included photographs, albums and scrapbooks, early annual reports and administrative records. During processing the photographs and scrapbooks were arranged in distinct series, and the annual reports and administrative records were interfiled in Series I, described in greater detail below. In addition, Archives & Special Collections originally held five inches of records of the Normal/Hunter College Alumnae organization relating to the settlement, including fund raising records and annual reports. These records were also interfiled in Series I.

During processing approximately eight linear feet of folders, binders, envelopes and duplicate records were removed. Two feet of this material, mostly annual reports, was returned to Lenox Hill Neighborhood House. The balance was discarded. The collection originally measured at 42 linear feet, but with subsequent donations in 2000, 2008, and 2017 by Lenox Hill Neighborhood House, the collection expanded to 127.5 linear feet.

Boxes 63 and 64 are closed to researchers, with the exception of Lenox Hill Neighborhood House staff, board members, or their approved agents, until 2025. All other records are open to research use without restrictions.

The collection was originally processed during January - March 1995 by Mr. James Moske. It was revised by Julio L. Hernandez-Delgado, Head of Archives & Special Collections in May of 2014. It was revised again by Lauren Stark, Non-Teaching Adjunct, Archives & Special Collections in October of 2017. In December 2018, Rebecca Altermatt, Archivist and Non-Teaching Adjunct added in Accession 2018-007, an addendum of materials dropped off by LHNH staff.

HISTORICAL NOTE

During the late 1800's the Yorkville area of Manhattan, extending from 59th Street to 96th Street between Fifth Avenue and the East River, experienced a dramatic increase in population and economic activity. Thousands of working class families - predominantly Germans but also including Austrians, Hungarians, Czechs, Irish and Italians - moved into tenement buildings and worked for local businesses and industries such as the breweries in the East 90s, and the Steinway piano factory just across the river in Queens. Yorkville's new residents formed a vital community, establishing churches, benevolent societies and fraternal organizations. But the dense concentration of population also gave rise to a host of urban problems: poor housing, inadequate health care, lack of educational opportunities, and crime.

It was just such an increase in the social problems attending urban growth that had led reformers and philanthropists in England to establish Toynbee Hall, the first settlement house. The settlement model, originally distinguished by a commitment on the part of its educated upper and middle-class volunteers to "settle" in working class communities in order to understand their problems first-hand, was imported to the United States in 1886. American settlement houses were in the vanguard of efforts to educate and provide social services for impoverished residents in their neighborhoods through programs such as kindergartens, day care, hot lunches, health clinics, visiting nurses, camps, playgrounds and arts education. In addition, the settlements were deeply involved in Progressive-era reform movements advocating improvements in housing, public health, and sanitation.

Inspired by the settlement model, and acting under the auspices of the New York Free Kindergarten Association, alumnae of the Normal College (later renamed Hunter College) opened a kindergarten at Third Avenue and East 63rd Street in 1890. Under the leadership of Mary Wells, the first Head Worker, clubs and classes for older children and teens were organized as well. In 1894 a building was rented at 446 East 72nd Street, and Alumnae Settlement was formally established. To serve settlement neighbors of all ages, programs were soon expanded to include women's groups, civics clubs, athletics, cultural events, English classes, and Fresh Air camp.

In 1911 the settlement was re-organized as the Lenox Hill Settlement Association. While Normal College alumnae maintained significant representation on the board of directors, the change reflected the fact that the settlement had grown into an institution of and for the whole community. Financial support for the settlement had also broadened beyond Normal College alumnae to include members of some of New York's most influential families. Rockefellers, Morgans, Pierreponts, and others were among the early benefactors.

In 1912 Rosalie Manning was hired as Head Worker, a position she held until 1937. Manning oversaw a tremendous increase in activity at Lenox Hill. During the 1910's this included hygiene clinics for mothers and babies, vocational education for youth, a Legal Aid Bureau and a Tenant's Association.

The small 72nd Street building was soon insufficient for the settlement's burgeoning activities. With important help from the Junior League, funds were raised to erect a new building at 511 East 69th Street. It included a playground, gymnasium and roof gardens. In 1919 an additional building at 63rd Street and 2nd Avenue was purchased and opened as United Community House (later re-organized as Children's House, with its own board of managers). In 1928 yet another building was constructed at 331 East 70th Street, and eventually all activities were consolidated under its one roof. This building remains the settlement's home to the present day.

In 1922 the settlement was re-incorporated as Lenox Hill Neighborhood Association (LHNA). Board committees were established to oversee the expanding work of the agency, which was now organized along departmental lines. Also during the 1920's the settlement took an active part in civic affairs through participation in the formation of United Organizations of Lower Yorkville, a predecessor of the Yorkville Civic Council. During the depression years of the 1930s, LHNA operated food and milk programs, and distributed Red Cross clothing. War-time work during the early 1940's included making bandages, a day care center for working mothers, and parties for servicemen. Resident Directors during this period were James Boswell, from 1937-1947, Kathryn Oswald (during Boswell's absence for war-time work with the Red Cross), and Jule Bouchard, from 1947-1949.

The demographics of Yorkville changed dramatically during the 1950's and 1960's. With the demolition of the Third Avenue elevated, real estate values climbed and developers targeted the neighborhood for the construction of high-rise luxury apartment buildings. In addition, several medical and educational institutions built new facilities in the area. As a result, thousands of working class families and senior citizens were evicted and displaced from their homes in old tenement buildings marked for destruction. Under the inspired leadership of Executive Director Lillian Robbins, LHNA responded to the crisis by establishing Lenox Hill Housing Services to provide these tenants with legal and relocation assistance. During the 1960s the settlement worked with the New York City Housing Authority (NYCHA) by sponsoring two moderate income housing projects, York Hill and Rosalie Manning Apartments. LHNA also worked with NYCHA in establishing Stanley M. Isaacs Neighborhood Center at the Isaacs Houses and Holmes Houses NYCHA project on East 93rd Street.

The problem of juvenile delinquency was addressed by LHNA during the 1950's and 1960's through joint work with churches and other community institutions. Neighbors United and Interfaith Neighbors were committees formed by Lenox Hill to coordinate social work programs oriented to neighborhood teens. The settlement's longstanding commitment to the needs of younger children was strengthened in 1965 through the Integrated Parent-Child Opportunity Center, an early model for the Head Start program.

In 1970 Lillian Robbins was succeeded as executive director by her protégé, Celine Marcus. (Robbins and Marcus had first worked together during the 1930's at Hamilton House, where Robbins was Head Worker from 1929 to 1942, and where Marcus was a case worker from 1938 to 1940. Marcus re-joined Robbins in 1959 as LHNA assistant director.) During her tenure as Executive Director, Marcus oversaw the development of innovative programs for senior citizens, adults and children, including a new senior citizen center at 341 East 70th Street, single parent groups, and an Environmental Education Program for fifth graders. Marcus was very active in civic affairs, serving for several years as a member of Community Board #8. She retired in 1982 and was succeeded by David Stern.

That same year LHNA responded to the worsening crisis of urban homelessness by providing space for a homeless women's shelter operated jointly with the Neighborhood Coalition for Shelter. Homeless services were later expanded with an Outreach Team and a rehabilitation program, and LHNA took full responsibility for the on-going shelter program beginning in 1985.

In 1994 the name of the settlement was changed to Lenox Hill Neighborhood House. Now in its second century, the settlement maintains its commitment to serve all members of its diverse community. Executive Director Nancy Wackstein oversees programs that serve over 20,000 people annually, from preschoolers to senior citizens.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The Lenox Hill Neighborhood House Collection documents the work of the settlement from its origins as a Normal College alumnae organization dedicated to improving the lives of east side children, to its current activity as a social service agency offering programs to meet the educational, recreational and social needs of all Yorkville residents. The collection spans from 1892 to 2015, with the heaviest concentration of records from 1950 to 1984. Included in the collection are: annual reports, board of directors' minutes and correspondence, head worker and executive director files, program reports, news clippings, photographs, albums and scrapbooks, fund raising records, Community Board #8 files, and the records of several other social service organizations and neighborhood committees that trace their origins to Lenox Hill. The collection documents the development of social work practice in the settlement context, and provides an excellent picture of social conditions, demographic change, political activity, and philanthropy on Manhattan's upper east side over a hundred year period.

The best documentation of the early work of the settlement is contained in annual reports, which begin in 1892, and board of director minutes, commencing in 1911. Photographs from 1900 through the 1920's show settlement staff and neighbors in a variety of activities including club meetings, classes, day camp and athletics. Scrapbooks containing news clippings, brochures, flyers and announcements from as early as 1915 document the philanthropic commitment of wealthy New York families to Lenox Hill, as well as day to day program activities. Annual reports, minutes, photographs and scrapbooks all continue through the 1980's with only a few gaps.

Program files from the 1930's through the 1950's are rich in materials on juvenile delinquency and group work with teenagers. These include detailed notes and reports by settlement staff on teenagers and their participation in settlement activities. The files of related organizations such as Interfaith Neighbors and Neighbors United supplement this material on teen group work. The files of another related organization, Stanley M. Isaacs Neighborhood Center, document a collaborative effort on the part of LHNA and NYCHA to provide social services for a new community of public housing residents.

Gentrification, housing and tenant organizing from the 1950's through 1970's are documented in program files, the records of the Rosalie Manning Apartments/230 East 88th Street Corporation, and in the Executive Director Files of Lillian Robbins and Celine Marcus.

The most comprehensive view of the wide range of settlement activities from the 1950's through 1980's is contained in the Executive Director Files of Lillian Robbins and Celine Marcus. Information on programs and activities, neighborhood organizations, local politics, and the settlement house movement in general are contained in these alphabetical subject files. Unfortunately, the files of Executive Directors (or Resident Directors and Head Workers) prior to Lillian Robbins did not survive, with the exception of a few pieces of correspondence of Rosalie Manning.
