BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

The youngest of four children born to Edward and Florence (Dawson) Grennan, Jacqueline Grennan Wexler was born Jean Marie Grennan in Sterling, Illinois on August 2, 1926. She was raised on a 250 acre farm where the Grennans raised cattle, corn, and soybeans. Jean Marie was raised by loving and devout parents who stressed the importance of obtaining a good education to all of their children.

Jean Marie Grennan attended St. Mary's Parochial School and Catholic Community High School, where she was the first girl to pursue a general science course instead of home economics. After graduating from Catholic High School she enrolled in Webster College, a small liberal arts school run by the Sisters of Loretto in Webster Groves, a suburb of St. Louis, Missouri. Jean Marie majored in English and mathematics and received her Bachelor of Arts degree cum laude from Webster College in June 1948.

Instead of applying for a fellowship to attend Radcliffe College, Jean Marie opted to become a nun. She reasoned that she wanted "to make her life productive for as many people as possible." Jean Marie's parents were ambivalent about her decision to become a nun but they respected her right to choose her own career path. After a year-long probationary period, she took her religious vows and was received by the Sisters of Loretto as Sister Jacqueline, a name that she chose in memory of her deceased brother Jack.

Sister Jacqueline taught English and mathematics for eight years in high schools that were operated by the Sisters of Loretto. From 1951 to 1954, she was on the faculty of Loretto Academy in El Paso, Texas, and from 1954 to 1959 she was on the faculty at Nerinx Hall in St. Louis, Missouri. During this period she took summer courses at Notre Dame University at South Bend, Indiana, where she received her Masters' of Arts degree in English in 1957.

In 1959, Sister Jacqueline became Sister Francetta Barberis' assistant at Webster College. In 1960, she became vice-president in charge of development of Webster College, and in 1962, was made executive vice-president. Sister Jacqueline became president of Webster College in 1965 when Sister Francetta accepted a different post in Washington, D.C.

As President of Webster College Sister Jacqueline was able to secure donations from corporations and wealthy individuals like Conrad Hilton which led to the renovation of the college campus. Sister Jacqueline was instrumental in transforming Webster College's education department into a pioneering teacher-training and curriculum research center. She was also pivotal in expanding the elementary school at Webster and in setting up the Webster Institute of Mathematics, Science and Arts, a laboratory school on the secondary level.

In 1965, federal officials offered Sister Jacqueline the post of directing an anti-poverty program in St. Louis, Missouri, but she respectfully declined the offer. But she soon realized that she could not continue to "live as a responsible and productive human being for the rest of her life under the vow" of obedience as a nun.

As president of Webster College Sister Jacqueline made institutional separation from the church her first priority. She petitioned ecclesiastical authorities for release from her vows and the Loretines asked for permission to turn the college over to a board of lay trustees. In 1967, the Vatican released Sister Jacqueline from her vows and granted the Sisters of Loretto permission to place Webster College under secular control.

Miss Jacqueline Grennan remained as president of Webster College until June of 1969 when she met and married Paul J. Wexler, president of Orpheum Productions Inc. Mrs. Wexler remained a devout Catholic her entire life. Shortly after her marriage, Mrs. Wexler moved to New York City where she assumed the post of vice-president and director of international university studies with the Academy for Educational Development.

In July 1969 Robert D. Cross resigned as president of Hunter College, CUNY to become president of Swarthmore College. In December 1969, the Board of Higher Education of the City of New York named Mrs. Wexler to succeed Dr. Cross and she assumed the presidency of Hunter College on January 15, 1970.

Between March and May of 1970, President Wexler was confronted with campus unrest as groups of students and supportive faculty demonstrated and voiced their concerns over the Vietnam War, restrictive racial policies in the U.S. and a general dissatisfaction with the College governance. In response to the perceived indifference to their demands, some students took direct action and occupied the public elevators and specific floors of the College. These and other related student actions obstructed the normal course of business and prevented the proper functioning of Hunter College. President Wexler was forced to use the New York City Police to regain control of campus facilities. She also cancelled classes and closed the College on several occasions to restore order. Eventually, through a series of meetings, President Wexler was able to settle the discord with students and faculty and returned Hunter College back to a state of normalcy.

In response to the CUNY-wide campus unrest the Board of Higher Education of the City of New York mandated the implementation of its Open Enrollment Policy in September 1970. This policy increased the enrollment of students throughout CUNY, changed the racial make-up of the student body, and altered the undergraduate curriculum to include courses on African-American Studies, Puerto Rican Studies, and Women's Studies. President Wexler embraced and enthusiastically endorsed the changes that Open Enrollment brought to Hunter College.

President Wexler was instrumental in implementing the B.H.E.'s Open Enrollment Policy at Hunter College; establishing CUNY's premier center for health care education; incorporating Bellevue Hospital's nursing school in the College; expanding health care training; raising funds to start a gerontology program in the School of Social Work; and in inaugurating a Women's Studies Program.

Jacqueline Grennan Wexler resigned as president of Hunter College in 1979. From 1982 until 1990 Mrs. Wexler was "president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews where she spoke frequently on interfaith issues in hopes of encouraging mutual respect among religions." In 1990 she retired and moved to Orlando, Florida with her husband where she tutored mathematics in the Orlando schools for several years. Mrs. Wexler also served on several boards, including the board of directors for United Technologies Corporation. She also received several honorary degrees.

Jacqueline Grennan Wexler died on January 19, 2012, and is survived by her husband Paul, daughter Wendy, son Wayne, sisters Sue Brock and Rita Burrows, four grandchildren, and two great-grand children.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The President Jacqueline Grennan Wexler Collection documents a unique and extraordinary period in the history of Hunter College. President Wexler agreed to steer and navigate Hunter College during the hectic, and at times, turbulent decade of the 1970's. During her watch President Wexler complied with the implementation of Open Admissions as mandated by the Board of Higher Education of the City of New York and effectively responded to campus unrest which disrupted the normal functioning of Hunter College. In addition, President Wexler oversaw the incorporation of the Hunter-Bellevue School of Nursing, the revision of the governance of Hunter College, the establishment of the Hunter College Senate, Women's Studies and Jewish Social Studies, the expansion of the SEEK Program and the Department of Black & Puerto Rican Studies and the construction of the East and West Towers of Hunter College.

The Wexler Collection is arranged in five series, thirteen subseries, and supplementary materials that were added to the collection after it was processed. Key subseries in this collection are 3.1 Academic Departments, Programs & Professional Schools; 3.2 Committees; 3.5 Hunter College Budgets; 3.6 Implementation of Open Admissions in CUNY/Hunter College; 3.7 Hunter College Campus Unrest; 3.8 Hunter College Building Program; 4.1 Articles and Newspaper Clippings about Jacqueline Grennan Wexler; 4.2 Addresses by Jacqueline Grennan Wexler; and 4.3 Articles by Jacqueline Grennan Wexler. Key folders in the addenda document the celebration of the Hunter College Centennial, (1870 - 1970), the implementation of the Equal Opportunity Program, the expansion of the SEEK Program and College Discovery, and the self-evaluation of President Wexler's administration.

Researchers and scholars whose interest lay in examining the history and impact of women presidents in municipally funded colleges should find this collection to be quite interesting. Jacqueline Grennan Wexler was an extraordinary individual who made a significant contribution to the growth and development of Hunter College.

SERIES DESCRIPTION

Series I – Personal and Biographical Information

The extraordinary life of Jacqueline Grennan Wexler is divulged in Current Biography Yearbook (1970), Who's Who (1970), The New York Times (1967), McCalls (1970), Hunter Envoy (1972), National Catholic Reporter (1978) and the St. Louis Dispatch (1979). These publications document Jacqueline Grennan's formative years in Sterling, Illinois, her primary and secondary Catholic education, her enrollment in Webster College, becoming Sister Jacqueline of the Sisters of Loretto in El Paso Texas, assuming the post as president of Webster College, and becoming the ninth president of Hunter College of the City University of New York on February 11, 1970.

Series II – Appointment and Inauguration

Series II documents the investiture of Jacqueline Grennan Wexler as the ninth president of Hunter College on February 11, 1970.

Series III – Hunter College

Subseries 3.1 Academic Departments, Programs, and Professional Schools, 1970 - 1979

Subseries 3.2 Committees, 1970 - 1980

Subseries 3.3 Correspondence, 1970 - 1978

Subseries 3.4 Memoranda, 1970 - 1977, 1979

Subseries 3.5 Hunter College Budgets, 1970 - 1979

Subseries 3.6 Implementation of Open Admissions in CUNY, 1969 - 1975

Subseries 3.7 Hunter College Campus Unrest, March - May 1970

Subseries 3.8 Hunter College Building Program, 1970 - 1979

Subseries 3.9 General Files

Subseries 3.1 consist of files on academic departments, programs, and professional schools from 1970 to 1979. Entries are arranged alphabetically. Subseries 3.2 consist of files on a variety of college-wide and departmental committees from 1970 to 1980. Entries are arranged alphabetically. Subseries 3.3 consist of general correspondence from 1970 to 1978; letters of condolence from 1971 to 1977; letters of reference from 1975 to 1977; and letters grouped under surnames from 1972 to 1975, and 1978. Subseries 3.4 includes memoranda from President Wexler's office from 1970 to 1977, and 1979. Subseries 3.5 consist of Hunter College budgets, allocations, projected cost summaries, budget reductions, and messages from 1970 to 1979. The mandate by the Board of Higher Education of the City of New York to implement an Open Admissions Policy in September of 1970 had a profound impact on the nine senior colleges and seven community colleges that then constituted The City University of New York. The Open Admissions Policy offered every New York City high school graduate a place in either a senior or community college based on their class ranking rather than on their individual grades. Subseries 3.6 consists of articles, reports and general materials which document the implementation, impact and the reaction of administrators, faculty, students and the general public to CUNY's Open Admissions Policy from 1969 to 1975. Between March and May of 1970 Hunter College witnessed the disruption of its normal course of business by groups of students and sympathetic faculty who were protesting a series of issues, i.e., America's involvement in the Viet Nam War, restrictive racial policies in the U.S., tardy response to student demands, and a general dissatisfaction with Hunter College's governance. Student unrest took various forms but the typical course of action included picketing and vocal demonstrations. On one occasion a small cadre of students seized control of the school elevators and blocked access to specific floors of the College facility. In response to this and other acts of civil disobedience, President Wexler initially solicited the assistance of New York City Police to restore a semblance of order. President Wexler also utilized her authority to cancel classes and close Hunter College on several occasions to secure the safety and well-being of students and faculty and to prevent the destruction of campus property. Eventually cooler heads prevailed and compromises were agreed to by all concerned parties. Subseries 3.7 consists of articles, committee minutes, reports, administrative statements, student and faculty demands and publications which document this historic era in the history of Hunter College. Subseries 3.8 consists of articles, a master plan, a space allocation study, and building plans for the East and West towers of Hunter College. Subseries 3.9 consists of general files that are arranged alphabetically. Key files in this subseries document the CUNY Council of Presidents, Energy Policy Studies, Evaluation of Instruction, Faculty Professional Obligations, Governance Charter of Hunter College, Hunter College Senate, Hunter College Student Government, Inter-America Affairs Program, Middle States Association, Research Foundation, and the Roosevelt House.
