BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Thomas Hunter was a highly motivated, competent and charismatic individual, as well as an amazing leader. His formal education was acquired in the North of Ireland prior to his emigration to the United States in 1850 at the age of nineteen. Thomas Hunter was a remarkable person. With an excellent but by no means extensive formal education, his acknowledged mastery of many subjects was largely self-taught. His educational experience in Ireland had taught him how to study, how to learn, and a great deal about people, especially about young people and how to teach and motivate them. Thomas Hunter acquired knowledge easily and quickly. He was able to teach his students in so interestingly and effective a manner that they invariably became lifelong devotees, supporters, and friends. The ability that Thomas Hunter had to acquire, to distill, and to present knowledge imbued his students with a lifelong love of learning, a rare and unusual gift. Where he led, his students willingly followed with enthusiasm.

Thomas Hunter was a go-getter, a self-starter, a determined investigator and organizer. It becomes apparent when one reads his renditions of history that he must have ferreted around to some depth in the original sources for the unusual facts and twists which invariably differentiated his lectures from those of his colleagues. He was always in a class of his own.

He began his American teaching career in 1850 in Grammar School Number 35 on Thirteenth Street in Manhattan, and rose to being its Principal by 1857. He held this position for the following twelve years (through 1869) when he left to become the President of the Normal College in 1870, which was later renamed Hunter College in his honor. Dr. Hunter held this position until 1906 when he became President Emeritus and held that post through October 1915.

Dr. Hunter's creative imagination and diligence also characterized his political activities on behalf of both his schools and his students. He always knew where to go and whom to see and how to persuade his audiences to vote for the achievement of his political goals. He was most thorough. He made it his business, not only to know, but also to understand, the relationships surrounding the political situations that had any bearing on his interests. He came to these subjects with what today would be called an "operations analysis" approach.

Dr. Hunter's lectures and writings were not rehashed hand-me-downs from long dead or boring scholars. His facts were invariably accurate, interesting, and of a nature which made his lectures come alive as dynamic and compelling stories. This was one of the reasons why his students loved him so, were loyal and prepared to follow his lead.

This ability and his intellectual honesty were significant components of the charisma he projected, and explain to some degree why his graduates invariably did their best for "Dr. Hunter" and jumped to the tasks of accomplishing his and their political wishes for the rest of their lives. They had all become his enthusiastic and ongoing constituency to level democracy upward. Having had the occasion to reflect upon this very subject in later life, Dr. Hunter's own conclusion and explanation for this phenomenon was simply that he loved his students, and they, knowing it, loved him in return. This is well evidenced by his "Old Boys" of Number 35 founding the Thomas Hunter Association at an extraordinary banquet at the Waldorf in 1897, which was, as it turned out, the first of many similar and enthusiastically attended functions held on Dr. Hunter's behalf at the now even more famous Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Dr. Thomas Hunter died in his home on October 14, 1915, five days before he would've celebrated his 84th birthday. He left behind a legacy of an individual who was dedicated and committed to the education and preparation of women for the challenges they would face in the 20th Century.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

During the winter of 1995 Mr. Michael Cassidy inventoried, removed, and assembled an assortment of materials on Thomas Hunter that were scattered amongst several collections. The preliminary inventory revealed an array of documents and writings consisting initially of five cubic feet. But subsequent insertions of addresses, annual reports, correspondence, and literary works expanded the collection to approximately eight cubic feet.

The President Thomas Hunter Collection provides a unique perspective into the life of an extraordinary individual who dutifully served as the first president of the Normal College of the City of New York from 1870 to 1906. In addition, the collection also highlights President Hunter as an extraordinary intellectual, teacher, writer and staunch advocate of access to higher education for women.

Articles and encyclopedia entries on Thomas Hunter document his formative years in Ardglass, Ireland, his primary education at the Dundalk Institute and at the Santry Science School, his first teaching post in the Callan School in 1849, his departure from Ireland to the United States in 1850, his appointment as a drawing instructor and later principal in Grammar School Number 35 on Thirteenth Street in Manhattan, and finally his tenure as president of the Normal College of the City of New York from 1869 to 1906.

President Hunter's annual reports provide a unique perspective on the establishment and growth of the Normal College of the City of New York from 1870 to 1906. The annual reports document the administrative and curricula progression of an institution whose initial mission was the education of women and the training of teachers for the common schools of New York City.

It is widely known that Dr. Thomas Hunter was the first president of the Normal College of the City of New York. What is not well known is that he was an artistic drawer and a skillful and clever writer. It should be noted that Dr. Hunter's preliminary architectural drawings served as a model for the construction of the Normal College edifice which stood from 1873 to 1936. The articles, essays, manuscripts, novels, plays, poems, satire, short stories, sonnets and drafts of his autobiography demonstrate Dr. Hunter's dexterity and ease in expressing himself in different literary genres. Regrettably, aside from Hunter's autobiography, which was published posthumously by his daughters in 1935, the bulk of his fiction and non-fiction works have yet to be examined and evaluated by researchers and scholars.

The President Thomas Hunter Collection should be of interest to researchers and scholars who are interested in examining the history of the Normal College of the City of New York from 1870 to 1906. Local and urban historians, Women's Studies specialist, and Hunter alums may also find this collection quite appealing.

SERIES DESCRIPTION

Series I – Biographical Information

Series I consists of addresses, articles, essays, and encyclopedia entries about Dr. Thomas Hunter's personal and professional life and his role as president of the Normal College of the City of New York from 1870 to 1906. The folders are arranged alphabetically by author or entry title.

Series II – Normal College of the City of New York

Series II consists of annual reports written by Dr. Thomas Hunter between 1870 and 1906, correspondence received and sent between 1849 and 1914, newspaper articles dated between 1870 and 1912, documents associated with the change of name from the Normal College to Hunter College in 1914, resolutions and tributes related to President Hunter's retirement in 1906, and obituaries and memorial tributes following Dr. Hunter's death on October 14, 1915. Another key component of Series II are materials associated with the Thomas Hunter Association. Between 1850 and 1870, Dr. Hunter taught art classes and eventually became the principal of Grammar School Number 35 at 302 Broadway, New York. The "Boys of 35" held annual dinners between 1897 and 1925 to honor and pay tribute to Dr. Thomas Hunter. The annual reports, correspondence, newspaper articles, resolutions and tributes are arranged chronologically. The folders pertaining to the Thomas Hunter Association are arranged alphabetically.

Series III – Writings

- 3.1 Novels
- 3.2 Plays
- 3.3 Poetry
- 3.4 Satires
- 3.5 Short Stories
- 3.6 Sonnets
- 3.7 Non-Fiction

Subseries 3.1 consists of unpublished novels some of which are nearly five hundred pages in length. The novels cover an eclectic range of plots and characters some of which are quite amusing. Subseries 3.2 consists of several interesting plays. "Count Julian," for example, is historically informative, fast-paced, cohesive, and nicely written. It is the tragic depiction of an Iberian Christian King's personality intertwined with his family's politics and that of his Court which led to the Muslim occupation and subsequent conquest of the Iberian Peninsula in 714 AD. The play incorporates aspects of Shakespeare's Richard III, Othello, and Hamlet. Subseries 3.3 through 3.6 consist of poems, satires, short stories, and sonnets respectively. Subseries 3.7 consists of addresses, articles, essays, lecture notes, manuscripts, and papers. The key work in this series is the manuscript draft of The Autobiography of Dr. Thomas Hunter which was assembled by his daughters Anna M. Hunter and Jenny Hunter. Attached to this manuscript are notes (probably inserted by the editors) which document the resignation of Thomas Hunter as president of the Normal College in 1906, the renaming of the Normal College of the City of New York in his honor in 1914, and the death of President Hunter in 1915. The unpublished novels are arranged alphabetically by title while the untitled novels are arranged alphabetically by letter. The entries listed under plays, poetry, satires, short stories, and sonnets are arranged alphabetically by title. The non-fiction entries are arranged alphabetically by category.

Series IV – Photographs

Series IV consists of black and white portrait and profile analog prints of Dr. Thomas Hunter from 1860 to 1913. The photographs are arranged chronologically.

Series V – Scrapbooks

Series V consists of four scrapbooks, two of which were created and kept by Jennie Hunter and Anna M. Hunter on their father Dr. Thomas Hunter. The scrapbooks contain newspaper articles, clippings, letters, newsletters, and illustrations which date primarily between 1870 and 1915. The scrapbooks will remain closed to researchers until digital versions become available.
